Open Road
Racing Will Be Barred

ROME (AP) — The probability loomed today that all open-road automobile racing including the mile Miglia, the race of blood and 7,000 curves, would be prohibited in Italy. A mounting wave of indignation was sweeping the country.
Politicians, newspapers and the men in the street still were talking about the tragic accident in Sunday's mile Miglia which took 13 lives and brought the toll of the race of 29 dead and 30 injured in two years.

While the Italian government studied what action to take, the annual Sardinian International Trophy Race, scheduled for May 26, was called off.

In Sunday's race, Spanish sportsman Alfonso De Portago, who has spent his life flirting with death, was killed along with Edmund Nelson, his American copilot, when their Ferrari blew a tire and smashed into a crowd, injuring 12 persons fatally. They were in third place at the time.

Another driver was killed in a separate accident.

Newspapers throughout Europe appealed for an "end to this mass homicide" and half a dozen Italian deputies and senators said they would propose parliamentary law prohibiting future races on open roads.

Familiar of spectators killed in the crash sent telegrams to Rome urging the government to ban the race.

Philip Wyle
Gives TV a
Rare Half Hour

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — That was a rare half-hour of television when Mike Wallace interviewed Philip Wyle on his ABC-TV Sunday evening program.

It was, to begin with, a good idea to select as the subject for Mother's Day Philip Wyle, that excellent American writer who 15 years ago belabored the most obnoxious form of mom in "Generation of Vipers."

Why Wyle was willing to go under the scorching lights is understandable. He's a courageous guy, ever willing to tilt a windmill when no knight in armor is around.

Why Wallace was willing to tackle Wyle is less understandable. Writers make difficult interviews. They're complex people, inclined to be diffuse. The better they are, the more complex they are — and Wyle is one of the best.

The best thing about it was hearing controversial opinions freely expressed on television without fear of the Madison Avenue Mafia. Here, for example, are some of Wyle's opinions:

On birth control — "Why not? We try to control death, don't we?"

On Israel — "I've always opposed building one more righteous group of religiousists as a political state. We should have taken them into our country."

On mercy killing — "That's okay."

On Liberate — "I've often thought of getting a gang of the last males left and stoning him to death with marshmallows."

The NBC-TV production of George M. Cohan's life, "Broadway," should have been entitled "The Four Cohans. Mickey Rooney's interpretation of Cohan's character was of a bumptious young egotist who incidentally wrote some music."

The genius of Cohan never was probed. The dimensions of his life and times were scarcely hinted at. It was, to boot, a technically inferior production. Just how much talent loomed upon it is the television mystery of this month of May.

'Outlook' Is Much Improved
TV Program

NEW YORK (AP) — The weekly network television program which has improved most in the past year and now stands as top of its type undoubtedly is "Outlook," the newsmagazine show visible on NBC-TV each Sunday.

Intelligence and enterprise have combined to make it a consistently absorbing program. A typical example will be seen on the home screen Sunday when "Outlook" takes cognizance of the third anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court's school integration decision.

"What do you think of in connection with a Supreme Court decision?" asked "Outlook" director Jack Shugrue the other day. "You think of nine men in black robes sitting on a bench. But visually, in the imagery of television, that means nothing of course."

The important questions, Shugrue went on to say, are how did integration happen and what have been some of its results. But to encompass such complex issues in the span of a half-hour TV program and to make them both informative and absorbing is a difficult problem.

A word Shugrue frequently uses and a journalistic trait "Outlook" constantly displays is "focus." meaning concentration on the human and understandable results of large and complex issues. Thus,

Some Things
That Make a Movie Star

By BOB THOMAS

MEXICO CITY (AP) What makes a movie star

The question has been asked over and over, and I have never heard a satisfactory answer — until now.

It came from Raryl F. Zanuck, one of Hollywood's great starmakers. The producer had just watched a scene with Tyrone Power and Ava Garner for his "The Sun Also Rises" at Churubusco Studios.

"Film stars aren't a breed apart," said Zanuck, puffing on his eternal cigar. "You'll find they are different types, just as you find different types in every walk of life. But to be successful, stars must have two qualities:

"They must have pleasing personalities and photograph well."

"They must be able to project."

Do they need to know how to act. It helps, he said.

"The day has passed when a star should get by on looks and personality alone," Zanuck remarked. "A star must have some degree of talent."

"Some get their training from the stars, like Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy and Ty. Others learned how to act in pictures. Gary Cooper is a self-made star like that."

"Today television is giving young players some semblance of the training they need."

"But acting isn't everything. Some of our best actors can never be movie stars because they are not pleasing personalities or can't project."

In 30 years of dealing with actors, Zanuck has seen his share of temperament recent example: Marilyn Monroe. But he doesn't seem alarmed by it.

"I don't know of any actress without some share of temperament," he said. "But you find that in an creative field. Writers might think I'm temperamental when I change a scene 50 times."

"There are enough stars today. The fault lies with the distributors and exhibitors. They are always screaming for new faces. But when you're casting a picture, they said, 'get so-and-so,' always an established name."

The United States has loaned four American minesweepers to Denmark. Four more are to be turned over to the Royal Danish Navy in the near future.

On Sunday, "Outlook" is achieving focus on the integration situation by concentrating on the five Negro plaintiffs whose cases were carried to the Supreme Court.

What has happened to them since To find out, "Outlook" sent reporters and cameramen to Norfolk, Va., Topeka, Kan., Sumner, S. C., Wilmington, Del., and Washington, D. C. What they learned will be seen on the home screens Sunday.

Shugrue, who directs the weekly NBC-TV news program with Chet Huntley and David Brinkley as well as "Outlook," believes in the camera close-up on a news commentator. "When you keep that camera up there, people can hear," he said. "And what's more important than that on a news program?"

Huntley, who is also the commentator of "Outlook," with assistants from Brinkley in Washington, remarked that "I believe the public is eager for more opinion than most responsible newsmen are willing to give on the air. If personal opinion will add anything to a broadcast I have no hesitation in giving it. But only as the opinion of one broadcaster, not as a pontificator who knows the answers to everything."

One might add a startling question: Why doesn't "Outlook" have a sponsor? If ever a television program deserved sponsorship, this one does.

Tests May Force
World to Be GoodSuggests a Woman News
Commentator

NEW YORK (AP) — June Lockhart

has an interesting idea.

"Why," she asks, "shouldn't there be a regular woman news commentator on television? A woman with a feeling and respect for news could give it a presentation that would interest everyone."

The next question, obviously, is why shouldn't June Lockhart try it?

She's willing — eager, in fact, to try it. An accomplished actress in the theater, movies and television, she confesses that for years a part of her heart has belonged to journalism. For three years she was a panelist on the NBC-TV news quiz show, "Who Said That?" She has written and worked for the publication "Guideposts." Last year she traveled with both presidential candidates as what she calls "a journalistic bluff." She can list numerous other qualifications.

So why not give Miss Lockhart a try as a TV commentator?

But perhaps, a man suggested to her the other day, a woman lacks the authoritative presence to handle a regular TV news program.

"I don't believe it," she replied. "Perhaps a beautiful woman would distract an audience from concentrating on the news. Miss Lockhart, who is blonde, blue-eyed and beautiful, looked so crestfallen that the man immediately denied the validity of that argument."

Miss Lockhart has a lot of good ideas. While in New York from her California home she is trying to interest a TV network in her idea for a weekly program which would bring to life some of the details and vignettes of every-day living. A three-year-old's first exposure to kite flying, for instance. A puppy's first day at home. A bride's first day after she returns from her honeymoon.

Television certainly can use a woman with ideas as well as presence. Let's hope we see more of June Lockhart in the medium.

Another Says
She Will Not
Wed an Actor

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Last week,

Lana Turner said she'd never marry again. New Joanne Dru says she'll never marry — another actor.

The lovely actress recently shed actor John Ireland. Before that, she was wed to singer-actor Dick Haymes. She admitted that marrying actors is a losing game.

"It's seldom possible to be married successfully to an actor unless the wife completely subjects herself to his career," she reasoned. "I've known women who have devoted their lives entirely to their husbands' acting careers and have been happy. But to women who want some life of their own, it's difficult."

"Let's face it: actors are egotists. They have to be; that's the nature of their work. They are constantly thinking about themselves and selling themselves. That can make them hard to live with."

Actors also have one — track minds, she observed. She recalled how Haymes became intensely interested in horses and devoted his entire time to them for eight months. Then one day he came in from the stable and said he'd had it. He never went near the horses again.

The same thing happened with photography. He was so engrossed in his meters and lenses that she couldn't get a word with him. The hobby blew over and he gave all the equipment away.

"That's another thing," Joanne signed. "Actors don't seem to worry at all about money. Though Haymes has earned huge amounts of money, he has been kind in his support payments for his two children. Likewise the Ireland alliance ended in a financial bust, she indicated."

Needless to say that I have quite a bit of money in the pond known as the Hollis Luck pond, located back of the University Experiment Station. I hope to ask the public to please not ask me and to please not go out to fish the pond anymore. As you know, it is a small pond and won't take long to fish it out at the rate it is going now.

I only wish it was large enough to accommodate everybody as it is very hard for me to turn down anybody, but if I give permission to one person, then the other person thinks I should do the same. Therefore, I am compelled to ask that you please abide by this, as I do not want to have to post same.

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — N. W. three nations — the United States, Russia and Britain — can sit back and finger the trigger of their hydrogen bombs as they'd finger a farer, well note.

With the explosion of its first hydrogen bomb high over the Pacific yesterday, Britain has moved into that new age where people may learn to be good because they're scared to death not to be. No bets are being taken on the outcome of this new age because it still has to be proved that people have enough sense not to start something that's going to get them killed.

It's comforting to the United States that its ally Britain now has both atomic and hydrogen bombs. It's one more bit of discouragement to the Russians against starting a hydrogen war since they can be hydrogenized themselves.

But it's going to be just a little harder on the nerves of all three countries, requiring them to stay constantly on the alert against a surprise attack which would be no only catastrophic but might be conclusive.

The Russians accuse the West of wanting war. The United States and Britain say the only reason for their bombs is to prevent the Russians from starting a war.

Britain's development of the atomic and hydrogen bombs proves only two things for immediate purposes: (1) the British had brains and ability and resources enough to make them and (2) they weren't kidding when on April 4 they announced a startling change in their defense setup.

On that date the British, convinced they can't defend their small island in the era of hydrogen bombs in the nose of intercontinental missiles, said they'd depend for defense on their ability to dish out equal catastrophe on anyone — meaning Russia — who started a war.

For the next three to five years Britain's ability to retaliate will depend on its bombers carrying atomic and hydrogen bombs manufactured in Britain. Then they will be sticking the bombs in the nose of missiles provided by the United States.

And, since the British are going to depend for safety against nuclear attack on the power of nuclear discouragement, they will reduce their army, navy and air force.

When they made the April announcement it was still not known they had been able to produce hydrogen weapons. Apparently they had. So they weren't bluffing when they disclosed their new policy of defense.
